

Canadian Professional Association for Transgender Health

2019 Conference Partnership Prospectus

The first – and largest – national professional association for transgender health in the world, the Canadian Professional Association for Transgender Health (CPATH) is known nationally and internationally to have a finger on the pulse of trans health, wellness and care. CPATH is an interdisciplinary professional organization which works to support and advocate for the health, well-being, and dignity of trans and gender diverse people by educating professionals and enabling knowledge exchange to develop and promote best practices; facilitating networks and fostering supportive environments for professionals working with and for trans people; and encouraging research to expand knowledge and deepen understanding about sex and gender diversity.

Health and wellness is a dynamic process of change and growth that involves the intersections of many factors. These include a knowledgeable and empowered community and access to health care that encompasses best practices and evidence based research across the lifespan. Advancing Trans Health and Well-being in Canada will showcase excellence in research, clinical practice, program development, policy and systems change.

The 2019 CPATH Pre-Conference Training and Conference is taking place Wednesday, October 30 to Sunday, November 3, 2019 at the Sheraton Montreal, 1201 Boulevard Rene-Levesque West, Montreal, Quebec H3B 2L7, Canada.

Designed to Appeal to a Wide Audience

CPATH's conferences have consistently featured the latest evidence and approaches to innovative research findings, clinical practices, models of care, and community-based approaches to improving transgender health and wellness. Unique in Canada, the conference provides an opportunity for participants to meet face to face on topics specifically related to trans health.

CPATH's conferences attract a multidisciplinary group of health care providers, clinicians, health administrators and policy-makers, educators, lawyers, researchers, government and non-governmental organizations, change agents from within trans communities and students and others, with a shared interest in the health and well-being of trans and gender variant children, youth, adults, and older adults.

Building on CPATH's previous successes, the 2019 Montreal conference is poised to provide opportunities for learning and knowledge exchange, to enhance clinical practice and capacity and explore new and emerging research. The conference will also contribute to building and strengthening networks and supports for transgender and gender non-conforming people and those who are key to providing health and wellness programs and services for trans communities.

The 2015 Halifax Conference had over 220 participants. The 2017 Vancouver Conference had over 330 participants. CPATH anticipates that the 2019 Montreal Conference will attract over 450 participants.

Pre-Conference Training Wednesday, October 30 & Thursday, October 31

A 2 day pre-conference training program is being offered for a variety of experience levels but will be particularly geared to new and experienced practitioners.

Expert trainers will offer sessions that will improve participant's knowledge, and develop skills to enhance their understanding of and work with trans and gender creative individuals, and increase their capacity to provide gender affirming and primary health care services to transgender patients.

All pre-conference training sessions will be CME/CEU accredited for Mainpro-M1 credits.
